

OFFICE MARKET OVERVIEW

CAMERON YOST, Senior Associate

The uncertainty caused from the pandemic continues to affect the Charleston office market with rate decreases and an increase in available sublease space, while companies wait to see what the future of work will look like post-vaccine. We are confident that 2021 will bring an uptick in activity as the country slowly begins to return to 'normal'. Despite the current uncertainty, office development remains strong and proposed new projects remain on schedule - specifically in the downtown market, where over 580,000SF of new space is scheduled to be delivered by 2022.
